Click and collect, (2022)

Collecting is a universal human behaviour. Whether it be collecting shot glasses or postcards from holiday destinations, ticket stubs from concerts or shows, or more common collectibles like coins or figurines, we're all collectors.

But why do we collect?

This exhibition explores the institutional collection of the Getty Museum and encourages you to think about similarities and differences with your own personal collections. We present an eclectic mix of objects from the collection, some purposefully acquired by the museum, and some donated from individuals personal collections.

At the end of the exhibition, we have provided a platform where we encourage you to share items from your own personal collections to create our own cabinet of curiosities.
